

Polecat Creek

in the press

Advance praise for upcoming Ordinary Seasons:

"With Ordinary Seasons, Polecat Creek fuses traditional mountain melodies with new lyrics and the result is sublime. The production is nicely transparent, allowing Laurelyn and Kari's beautiful duet singing to shine brightly through a fresh acoustic weave. The group has the knack of fitting new songs and old songs seamlessly together. Simply put, this is plain good music." Tim O'Brien

On Polecat Creek's critically acclaimed 2004 release, Leaving Eden:

"Memorable and lyrically sophisticated...strong vocals, tight harmonies, compelling arrangements, and impeccable musicianship all help to bring out the best in the duo's songs." No Depression

"Warning: Polecat Creek's Leaving Eden may get stuck in your CD player...you may not be able to hit eject until you've danced around the house a few times, singing along...while solid melodies and vocal harmonies may be the first thing you notice, the pictures painted in Polecat Creek's lyrics will keep you coming back for more." Performing Songwriter

An immaculate example of contemporary folk music brimming with exhilaration and originality." Bluegrass Unlimited

"When listening to this record I feel like a traveler who just scored a ride from the coolest gals in town. Like all things of the rural South, this music balances past and present at every turn. It brings us on a journey that skirts mountains, delta, piedmont, and bayou, and it looks at life from as many points of view. We always end up where we want to be, with at least a little dust (or red clay, or swamp mud, or axel grease) on our shoes." - Dirk Powell

"Laurelyn and Kari are two of the finest up-and-coming singers and songwriters on the country and traditional music scene today. Their approach to music combines the best of tradition alongside new and original ideas." - Alice Gerrard
